The following sketch of the career of the celebrated player will interest those not already amiliar with it.

This noted violinist was born in 1830, a Howes, in Hungary. At the age of twelve he entered the Vienna Conservatory, which he left at the breaking out of the Hungarian revolution to enter the ranks of the revolutionists as a volunteer. The fortune of arms was adverse to the patriots, and Remenyl, to avoid more unpleasant consequences, left the country an sailed for America. He gave a number of very successful concerts through the country. In 1853 he returned to Europe, making his home at Weimar, where he was the companion and friend of Liszt. He then went to England and in 1854 was appointed solo violinist to land, and in 1879 returned to America, since Kingdom will be closed.
